

Gueridon table

Jean Prouve, 1949

Description

Gueridon table by Jean Prouve for Vitra.

Jean Prouve designed the Gueridon table for the University of Paris. The design proves that modern tables do not have to be made of steel and glass. Instead it offers a variation on Prouve's standard formal language, with its architectural overtones, by using a natural material.

Gueridon has also been given a makeover; the legs, materials and surfaces are the same as those of Table Solvay, but it has an extended diameter and height.

Table top in oiled, solid wood in the finishes natural oak, smoked oak or American walnut.
