"An image I had at the beginning of this project was from the title of the brand, Eiger. It was an illustrated Finsteraarhorn on a Swiss postage stamp, which represents a simplified visual interpretation of 'upheaval', a disturbance that is created by the movement of the earth's crust and also by the carving by the glacier. Then we started to look at folding papertechniques to repeat this idea of 'when you press both ends of material and the middle goes higher' phenomenon. The transition from paper to silver has worked well." - Tomoko Azumi
