

Here Comes The Sun light

Bertrand Balas, 1969

Description

Here Comes The Sun pendant lamp by Bertrand Balas for DCW éditions.

The Here Comes The Sun pendant lamp was created by Bertrand Balas, a French architect born in 1935.

When it was first released in 1970, Bertrand Balas wanted to call it Here Comes the Sun because of the Beatles song, but he never did as he thought that the Beatles would not let him use the name. This classic ceiling lamp is still collected by many French lighting addicts.

At first sight, this round lamp looks like many other round lamps. But the Here Comes the Sun by Bertrand Balas becomes magical when the light is turned on.

Available in 6 sizes and 6 finishes. Black satin or white satin exterior, with white or copper interior. Large and Extra Large sizes available with pink copper interior. 3m fabric cable.

Made from aluminium.
