

Doo-Wop pendant

Louis Poulsen, 1952

DescriptionDoo-Wop pendant light by Louis Poulsen.

Designed in collaboration between the Danish Navy Buildings Department and Louis Poulsen, the Navy Pendant, as it was originally known, was first introduced in 1952 and was commonly used in Danish marine buildings.

Staying true to the original design, the reissued Doo-Wop pendant has been updated with contemporary finishes. The Doo-wop pendant features a hand-spun shade which provides a downward soft light through the white lacquered inner conical reflector.

The brass version, in particular, illustrates the standard of craftsmanship as it is made from a solid sheet of brass with a high-gloss finish.

Shade available in brass, copper and stainless steel or powder coated in dark grey or white.

Please note, the brass, copper and stainless steel surfaces are untreated, which means that the surface will change over time and develop a patina.

Supplied with ceiling cone and 3m white textile cable. Max weight: 1.5kg

Light source: 1x60W E26/27 bulb (not included). IP 20 rating.
