

R40 mirror

Sebastian Wrong, 2018

Description

R40 Mirror by Sebastian Wrong for Owl.

R40 is a collection of mirrors designed by Sebastian Wrong. The range is characterized by a corner radius of 40mm to the solid ash frames.

The R40 comes in three sizes, small medium and large. The medium and large can accommodate a bespoke hanging device to allow the mirrors to drop away from the wall at a chosen angle, whilst apparently floating away from the wall.

The flexibility offered in adjusting the angle of the mirror acknowledges historical precedents in a modern manner. The hanging device allows commercial environments such as restaurants to direct reflections to suit the users and the interior. Equally in domestic interiors, over a mantelpiece, the mirror is orientated towards the focus of the room, rather than an opposing wall.

The R40 mirrors may also be hung in a traditional manner, flush with the wall, in landscape or portrait alignments.

The frames are produced through a new label set up by Wrong, and utilise CNC technology to create a timeless and simple profile. OWL (Objects With Life) oversee the production of functional, practical and well-made objects for everyday use.

Please note, all models can be orientated in two ways, with exception of R40 Large-Float version which may only be angled or float in landscape orientation.
