

Alexander Girard panels

Alexander Girard, 1971

Description

Environmental Enrichment Panels by Alexander Girard for Vitra.

The architect and designer Alexander Girard was one of the leading figures in American design during the postwar era. His passion for colours, patterns and textures found expression in the field of textile design, which was a focal part of his oeuvre.

Beginning in 1971, Girard developed a series of screen printed graphics on fabric to add a touch of human warmth and emotion to office environments: the Environmental Enrichment Panels. For these designs, he showed a preference for abstract graphic patterns or figurative subjects based on such timeless themes as love, peace, and freedom. With a multitude of diverse and inspiring motifs, these large wall panels were also frequently used in private interiors.

Vitra's re-edition of the Environmental Enrichment Panels, which come in various sizes based on the respective motif, comprises a number of high-quality screen printed art panels (75% linen, 25% cotton). Metal rods are fitted at the top and bottom of each panel for easy installation. Thanks to these features, the Environmental Wall Hangings provide a simple way to bring a unique, decorative accent to any room.

Please refer to product downloads for further information on the series and for care instructions.
